LETTER FROM THE CHIEF EDITOR

Dear friends and supporters of the Cat Welfare Society,

How time flies! We are now well into the second quarter of the year and 2018 is but a blip in the review mirror.

My involvement with the Society has grown considerably since joining late last year and it certainly has been an eye-opening experience.

As a life-long animal lover and pet owner, I always felt that something was missing when I came to Singapore some years ago. That of course being a furry companion!

Growing up, I always had pets; cats, dogs, birds, snakes, tortoises – you name it, I had it at some point in time. So, to be without a pet was a little odd for me. This was the main driving force behind me becoming involved with the Society.

I thought that if I could help make life better for just one stray cat, then I should. After all, everyone – animals included – have the right to a life that is free from despair and danger.

The Society has made extraordinary progress on that front through its efforts in mediation and sterilization, efforts that would not have been possible without your kind help.

We continue to work hard toward our goal of creating a humane, informed and responsible society in Singapore where cats are cared for responsibly as pets and treated with kindness as community cats.

We hope for your continued support along our journey and express once more our sincerest thanks for all you have helped us achieve so far.

With gratitude and best wishes,

KYLE DOCHERTY
Chief Editor

Mass Pet Abandonment at Sumang

On March 1 of this year, Cat Welfare Society was alerted to the fact that 16 cats and three kittens had allegedly been abandoned in cages outside Block 222A Sumang Lane.

Word soon spread through social media and photos of the cats were shared quickly, with many appalled by the horrific state that the cats were found in. The cages were filthy and cramped, and one could only wonder how long the cats had suffered in those appalling conditions before being discovered. A member of public contacted the authorities and the cats were brought in by the Agri-Food and Veterinary Authority.

A long-time independent rescuer, Ms Lee, was informed of the case and she just knew that she had to help the cats. She did a call for fosters and thankfully got several responses. Ms Lee managed to bail out the cats and the three kittens. The cats are now with eight rescuers.

Some the cats had been running fevers as high as 40.5 degrees Celsius, and a few obviously had flu.

Unfortunately one kitten did not survive, passing away from its illness despite the best of care being rendered to them by their fosterer.

The question of how long the cats had been subjected to such filthy and inhumane conditions remains unanswered but all the fosterers want now is for the cats to get better. The main aim is to get them up to speed in terms of health and wellbeing before putting them up for adoption and allowing them a chance at having a loving home filled with care and respect.

The anger and sadness that rescuers feel when they see innocent lives being treated like this is sometimes unbearable. These rescuers do great work, opening their homes and lives and homes to rectify mistakes made by an irresponsible and cruel human.

Pet abandonment is a crime and is punishable by law in Singapore. As such, Cat Welfare Society executive director Laura Ann conducted door-to-door interviews with residents of Sumang Lane to gather information regarding the abandonment of these cats. It is paramount that the person responsible be brought to justice.

Acts of cruelty such as this are the reason why animal welfare groups constantly lobby for ground support and the support of enforcement agencies.

WHAT CAN WE DO TO STOP INCIDENTS LIKE THIS FROM HAPPENING AGAIN

■ Advise friends and family to sterilize their pet cats

Cats breed quickly – a single pair of cats can produce up to 6-12 kittens per year. With these kittens reaching maturing in just 5 months, the situation can very quickly get out of control.

■ Let friends and family know that pet abandonment is an offence in Singapore.

Under the Animal and Birds Act, any person who is found guilty of pet abandonment can

- Be fined an amount not exceeding $10,000 or be sentenced to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months or to both for the first offence and

- Be fined an amount not exceeding $20,000 or be sentenced to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 2 years or to both for the second offence

Source : <https://sso.agc.gov.sg/Act/ABA1965>

■ Come forward and be a witness if you see an act of abandonment being committed.

The Sumang kittens were 2 of the saddest rescues I've ever had. I call them Sue and Mango, after the location. Both were ridden with fleas and mites, severely malnourished and anaemic. Sue, the smaller one, especially broke my heart; she was hanging by a thread. I just knew I had to give my all to save her.

Sue and Mango were precious little lives that didn't ask to be born into a cage, torn from their mother, having lost their third sibling only days before foster care. They were only a month old and all they knew were hunger, disease and a caged death waiting to grip them as it did their other sibling.

Every time I look at them now, I feel gratitude that they have pulled through bravely, healthy and bouncy. But I also feel a sense of failure, and I wonder if Sue and Mango know that the humans who wrecked their lives go unpunished. I think these babies know... ”

HEALTH BITES

When Cancer Strikes

Did you know that one in five cats will develop cancer in their lifetime? It's a startling fact that has serious real-life consequences. We spoke with Dahlina Dahalan to discuss her recent battle with the disease which developed in her beloved Patches.

Cats have always been a big part of my life. Life felt a little incomplete when I got married because my husband wasn't a cat person at all. Three years later however, I saw five-month-old Patches on LiFeline's Facebook page and couldn't stop thinking about her for several nights. There just was something about that pure soul of hers that I just knew I had to get her - after convincing my husband of course! We started with a two-week trial adoption and the rest is history.

Patches was such a darling sweetheart and I think she secretly loved my husband more than me. She was so very special, the connection we had was indescribable. She was my daughter and my best friend. She slept with me, sharing the same pillow every night and would always console me and put her head next to mine every day - more so whenever I felt low. She loved to kiss and being kissed. I never had that feeling with other pets before.

Our troubles began with an inflammation of Patches' left third eyelid, which we thought was just a normal eye infection. But after two rounds of antibiotics and eye drops, the condition worsened with her eyelid becoming more inflamed and starting to protrude.

The first vet we went to recommended we go for a CT scan and biopsy with a specialist. My heart broke into a million pieces when the specialist told me that Patches had aggressive T-cell lymphoma. There was a soft tissue mass behind her eye which lead to near her brain. Surgery was of course not an option - it was far too risky. Fortunately, lymphoma is treatable with chemotherapy. But there was no guarantee of full recovery and all we could possibly hope for was the extension of quality time and life with us.

After the diagnosis I was heartbroken beyond words. It was very overwhelming for me. I was very sad, and a lot of things went through my mind: Why her? Why was my most precious daughter being tested with such a chronic illness? I could not lose my baby. I knew I must do whatever it takes to treat her.

It was very tough for me to cope with my emotions as Patches had been very sensitive to how I felt so I had to try to put on a strong front for her.

The journey to get her better was not an easy one because not many vets in Singapore provide comprehensive chemotherapy. We went to one vet - the fourth since she was first diagnosed - where she was given CHOP chemotherapy regimen every week for close to three months.

The good news was that Patches' third eyelid was no longer protruding, but the bad news was that she started to experience a swelling lymph node on the left side of her neck. In a way, I was "grateful", at least we could "see and feel" if things flared up or not. On good days she looked fine, but on bad days she looked very ill; almost lifeless with her eyes rolled up. We found out one of the drugs was quite harsh for her. But there was no way around it.

I then brought Patches to another vet, Dr Christopher Tham at Jireh Veterinary Clinic, for another opinion. Dr Tham a great deal of expertise in oncology and when we first met, I knew my baby would be in good hands. Patches unfortunately had a very bad episode as soon as we started treatment with Dr Tham. Her lymph nodes were swelling so badly that she lost mobility and could not even swallow food from the syringe feed. Dr Tham implemented rescue protocol and put Patches on tube feeding and a week later she was all fine!

Dr Tham closely monitored her development each week with blood tests and did physical checks on her lymph nodes. He would conduct research and alter the chemotherapy protocol as and when necessary according to Patches' condition. Not all medication worked however, and there was a period where Patches suffered seizures as often as four times a day – it was such a scary time for us. I even boarded her at the clinic during the day for two weeks, after which she got out thankfully.

Dr Tham treated Patches for five months, each week without fail we saw him and during the more trying times we saw him almost every day. It was a very trying time for everyone involved but it was something that I had to do. Apart from the chemotherapy, we also did NK cell immunotherapy (which was very costly) for her where natural killer cells are introduced to combat the cancer cells. Unfortunately, this was unsuccessful.

In early December 2018, Patches contracted flu that did not go away and her lymph nodes, which had been under control, become inflamed once more and her stomach became bloated, her nose bled non-stop and her blood levels dropped significantly. Despite all this however, she was okay; walking around and looking bright.

On December 12, we did an ultrasound on Patches' abdomen and it showed the lymph nodes in the surrounding area were enlarged. We did a blood transfusion on December 18, where Patches' sister and best friend Namira donated her blood. We were hoping that the transfusion would allow Patches to bounce back and continue the fight.

On the morning of December 19, Patches still looked okay before my husband and I left for work, though she had been breathing a little heavier. She ate the food we gave her via syringe, and she was walking. In the afternoon, my mother brought Patches to Jireh for some blood tests to check if her condition had improved. That evening, my heart shattered when I was told the readings were not encouraging and that I needed to be prepared for the worst, and that her condition could deteriorate very fast.

I could not digest any of it – all I wanted was just to bring her back and spend what time I had left with her. I even took leave from work just to be with her.

One day, I was very shocked to see my baby was breathing very hard in her carrier. A few minutes later it looked as though she had suffered cardiac arrest; she gasped deeply and then breathed raggedly. We took Patches to the vet and she was placed on the table where the doctor tried to resuscitate her, but she was fading. I took her in my arms, and she took her final breath.

The grief and pain I felt over her loss is indescribable. It has been more than three months, but I think about and miss her every day.

To preserve Patches' quality of life we tried a great number of things. Including those was a change of diet and delivery of feeding. Patches was not eating on her own around the second month after she was diagnosed. We would syringe feed her every morning and evening, as well as noon over the weekend. I would slow boil organic chicken, blend it into a puree and then feed her via a syringe.

I also gave her Royal Canin's convalescence support milk to supplement her dietary intake which helped prevent Patches from losing too much weight over the course of her treatment.

Patches also took several supplements including vitamin C, B complex, iron, probiotics, premium grade Sang Hwang, herbal supplements and taurine; all of which I would prepare into capsules and then feed her. She also had daily subcutaneous fluid.

I also had her covered in holistic aspects, had regular animal communication done with her to check in how she was feeling, and reiki healing done every 2-4 days to energize her. I also applied premium grade essential oils on her.

I spent more than $22,000 on medical treatment for Patches over the nine-month journey. Taking into consideration supplements, holistic care and special diet, I spent in excess of $32,000 in total. Yet I have no regrets; I would do anything for any one of my fur babies.

The journey with Patches was nine months of emotional, mental and physical challenge. The commitment and sacrifice of time with all our focus on her. But it was all worth it, we got to spend quality time together and both Patches and I fought a fierce battle together right until the end.

Cancer can come when we least expect it. Patches had always eaten premium foods, drank alkaline water all her life and had annual check-ups and still got it.

As responsible pet owners, we need to be prepared in every way possible for when illness strikes our fur babies.

BENEFITS OF CAT COMPANIONSHIP

CATS ARE WONDERFUL COMPANIONS

One of the best reasons to add a cat to your family is the companionship they provide. Cats are not the grumpy, solitary, anti-social animals you might have been led to believe they are. They enjoy the presence of their human owners and might just follow you into every room to nap near you or see what you are doing.

The comfort of a cat nearby or purring on your lap is a delight and can really help with moments of loneliness. Coming home to a furry friend waiting for you means never coming home to an empty house.

CATS REDUCE STRESS & ANXIETY

The presence of a cat has been known to have a dramatic impact on their human's disposition and help to reduce stress and anxiety. The physical contact and mutual trust of petting and cuddling is a relaxing and stress releasing exchange. The concern and care for the well-being of a cat can help take your mind off worries and stressful situations. Even just their behaviour and general "cuteness" will improve your mood and distract you from the stresses of the world. It's very hard not to smile with a cat nearby.

CATS PROVIDE EMOTIONAL SUPPORT

Cats can help with support and provide comfort for their humans during times of emotional suffering. Having a cat can help you cope with the pain of loss whether it's a break up, the death of a friend or family member or perhaps they killed off your favorite Game of Thrones character.

Spending time with your cat can distract you from negative feelings or depression and can help you cope with your emotions. It doesn't matter what it is, your feline companion will always listen to your problems and be there for you. They will never judge you and will always listen, they just might not talk back.

Kris Kirkpatrick

CATS IMPROVE CHILD DEVELOPMENT

Having a feline family member can have a valuable impact on the growth of children. They can assist in the development of positive behaviours such as responsibility learned from feeding, cleaning and playing. Children have been known to develop empathy at a younger age with our furry friends around and depending on us to keep them happy, healthy and harm free.

CATS ARE FUN!

Cats love to play! With a piece of string, your foot under a blanket, a laser pointer, or a simple empty box, you can entertain yourself and your cat endlessly. They also make wonderful subjects for aspiring photographers or anyone who enjoys social media sharing. Cats have dominated the internet and pop culture forever and with good reason. They are adorable, fun and full of personality. Who doesn't enjoy cat photos and videos?

CONCLUSION

Cats are adorable affectionate animals that have a positive effect on their human's health, happiness and mood. They do well in small spaces, have a lower financial and economic impact and are a wonderful addition to any home.

LAUGHTER IS THE BEST MEWDICINE

Your Zodi-cat Sign

As we enter the second half of the year, we begin to realize just how quickly 2019 is passing us by. All our hopes, aspirations and dreams for the new year have long since faded away; our plans to climb that cat tree three times a week now nothing but a source of personal embarrassment every time we get stuck in the cat flap.

Even that peppy little mantra "New year, new meow" has run long since out of the steam required to get us eating healthier or being nicer to the family dog.

But fear not fur friends, help is at paw! We've gathered our sharpest minds to decipher the stars and give you the vital information needed to make it through the next few months in one fabulous piece.

ARIES (March 21 - April 19)

June is going to be a month of positive energy with the arrival of a new moon, so be sure to try out new things, Aries. Who knows what successes may come your way with this positive backdrop - maybe you'll even get lucky in catching that pesky red dot!

There are challenges on the horizon, however. Expect a great deal of change to occur around mid-July. In cases where this change is not welcome, you may need to be firm and stand your ground. Repeat after me, "No human, a 7pm feeding time is not suitable!"

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20)

The transit moon enters the sign of Taurus in early June making it the perfect time to sit up all night and howl with gusto. Be sure to wake your humans - they won't want to miss your rendition of "Cat's in the cradle" for all the world.

Remember, dear Taurus, just because you're an earth sign doesn't mean you have to be grounded quite so much. Reach for the stars, if you'll pardon the pun, and who knows what you might find.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20)

Some say that Geminis are troublemakers - we say live up to that reputation and then some.

The next few months present the perfect opportunity for you to try out some fun new activities that will keep your humans on their toes, and we all know there is no better place for humans to be.

We personally recommend a late-night game of tag. After all, everything is more fun in the dark. Just remember to invite your humans to play.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22)

You're a serious cat, Cancer. A lot of people enjoy that trait in you, but don't allow it to dictate your happiness.

Dwelling too much on a certain problem or focusing on things that you cannot change is not healthy. Keep your problems in perspective! Sure the dog has a bigger feed bowl than you, but you're allowed to sleep on the bed and he isn't.

LEO (July 23 - August 22)

Disappointment looms for you this month, dear Leo. But it is important to keep your sunny disposition.

In fact, try and spend as much time lounging around in the sunshine and having a snooze. It will certainly go a long way to keeping you from becoming too moody to handle! Your lucky object this month is a pillow. Use it wisely and often, sleepyhead.

VIRGO (August 23 - September 22)

Be wary of things that seem too good to be true these next few weeks, Virgo. But that's not to say you shouldn't seize any good opportunities that come your way.

What is that the humans say, carpe diem? Go out and there and get that fish! It's not your fault that the humans left it on the dining room table without supervision.

LIBRA (September 23 - October 22)

Communication could be a problem for you in June, Libra. Well let's face it... when isn't it exactly?

You howl for food and your human refills your water bowl. You howl for food and your human gives you delightful scratches behind the ear. You howl for food and - you guessed it - your human gets it wrong again. Perhaps you could try hunting for your own food? I hear it's good for your quads!

SCORPIO (October 23 - November 21)

Potentially trying times ahead for you in June, Scorpio. So, try and stay on top of things. And by that, I mean your human's lap. Remember, it's easier to get your way when you've got your human pinned down to the couch and they can't get away.

June is also a month of betrayal for you, Scorpio, so be on the lookout for any attempts to trick you into a visit to the vet!

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 - December 21)

You will be compelled to do exciting new things over the next few months, Sagittarius. Fear not, though, this feeling will pass. If you do feel a little uninspired or perhaps a little bit bored, you could always try sleeping on another part of the couch and see if that perks you up.

Your unlucky object this month, as it was last month and the month before that, is a dog. Be wary of these creatures, Sagittarius. If you get too close, you'll end up smelling like one and we certainly don't want that!

CAPRICORN (December 22 - January 19)

Someone from your past will unexpectedly reappear in your life this month, Capricorn. Be sure to look your best at all times to remind this cat exactly what they're missing. FYI - a little bit of toothpaste goes a long way. Let's not let all that hard work go to waste with a case of fishbreath!

AQUARIUS (January 20 - February 18)

A Jupiter/moon combination is likely to have a slightly counterproductive effect on what would have otherwise been a productive June for you, Aquarius.

But bear in mind the importance of having a good work/life balance. By all means keep your humans up all night with a game of "Bite the toe" but be sure to catch up on the necessary rest the next day - you do, after all, need your beauty sleep.

PISCES (February 19 - March 20)

You may experience increased clumsiness in June, Pisces, so be wary of well... pretty much anything. We've seen more than enough cat fail videos to know just how dangerous your day-to-day "cat-ivities" are. Ha! Get it?

Greater focus will therefore be needed to ensure you navigate through the coming months successfully. Patience is also key. Remember that time you tried to eat chicken straight out of the pan on the stove and burnt your tongue? No repeats, okay Pisces?

ADOPTION IN FOCUS

Interview

Adopting a cat can be a daunting task and there are many things to consider before taking on such a commitment. We talk to Eden about her journey to becoming a mother to Wiggum.

WHAT MADE YOU ADOPT YOUR CAT?

Wiggum was not the first cat that I inquired about; previously, I had inquired about two kittens, but the foster mothers were not that keen on having a family with a toddler adopt such young cats. When I found Wiggum's profile, I fell deeply in love right away. He had this warm, cute face and his description was absolutely perfect! A fun, energetic and sweet boy. We were so happy that his foster mother was keen on having us become his forever parents.

HOW HAVE YOUR CHILDREN ACCEPTED THE CAT?

The boys adore him so much and they spend a lot of their time at home playing with him.

HOW HAS YOUR CAT CHANGED YOUR LIFE AND WHAT HAVE YOU LEARNT FROM THE CAT?

He is our sunshine. He greets us when we come home after a day of school and work. He loves the family movie time and naps with us in the afternoon.

The only thing I believe that really changed is our outings. We usually spend long days out on weekends. However, with Wiggum at home, we have to think about his wellbeing. We usually come back at mid-day to rest and make sure he has a bowl of food and fresh water. He definitely is a people cat!

Pets change our lives in many small ways, and I guess everyone learns a little something from our animals as we do from the people who surrounds us.

I thought my kids would teach me patience! Well, Wiggum certainly teaches me a lot of patience. He wants lots of cuddles and gets very excited when he is hungry.

WHY DO YOU BELIEVE IN ADOPTING VERSUS BUYING

Initially, I wanted a certain breed of cat, a Scottish Fold, which I had had as a child. However, after talking with friends who own cats, they urged me to adopt instead. I then did some research and found that there are a great number of kittens and cats needing homes in Singapore.

I AM SURE THERE ARE MANY SPECIAL THINGS ABOUT WIGGUM, COULD YOU TELL US ONE?

The one special thing about Wiggum which I have never seen with another cat is he plays fetch. I mean real fetch. He will bring his mouse to my hand. I will throw it and he will do the same thing over and over until he is tired!

HOW DID YOU PREPARE FOR THIS NEW ADDITION TO YOUR FAMILY?

Well with adoptions, there can be certain conditions or a contract to follow. As you are adopting, you are taking a fur baby from a foster mother who only wants what is best for her baby. With Wiggum, we needed to mesh our windows for his safety because we live on a very high floor. Wiggum also has a recommended diet; he is currently on the kitten brand science diet and some wet food.

Of course, you also need basic things such as a kitty litter box and proper filling for that. Wiggum is also a big fan of catnip-filled toys so we had to make sure we had one of those on hand!

As we have young children, three boys ranged between 2.5 and 7 years old, we also had to do certain prep work with them. We had to explain to them that Wiggum is a beloved member of the family. Now the older boys help out with the chores, such as filling the food bowl and clearing the litter box, while the youngest gets all the cuddles!

Myltchyfingers

Looking for a gift that is truly unique? Look no further than Myltchyfingers. Myltchyfingers does 100% handmade, customisable needle felted woolly miniature animal figurines, brooches and accessories.

Needle felting is a time-consuming process that uses a special barbed needle to sculpt wool fibers into more condensed shapes.

Whiskers were collected when they dropped off naturally. DO NOT cut cat whiskers as they are important sensory tools that helps a cat see in the dark and steer clear of hungry predators.

I learnt about needle felting nine years ago from a book and am still fascinated by how wool fibers can be sculpted freely into different shapes and forms just by stabbing with the special barbed needle. I especially enjoy the challenge and freedom of needle felting as one is not restricted to any template or pattern. Because they are handmade, the finished product can never be duplicated. This makes every piece truly unique.

It is always satisfying to know that the little creation brings a smile to the customer. For some of the animals that have crossed the rainbow bridge, the felted replicas might also give their owners much spiritual comfort. ”
